DISGUST SHOWN OVER SNIPING AT EISENHOWER

Certain British and French elements likely to meet trouble

DIFFICULT SITUATION

Critics of American policy may learn general can get tough

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 — The United States, it was learned authoritatively today, intends to stiffen its attitude toward all French elements which are contributing to the political confusion in French North Africa.

Thoroughly disgusted at the sniping by certain French and British elements at American handling of the French North African situation, as well as by the political squabbling among the French themselves, American officials predicted that Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, U. S. commander of Allied forces in French Africa, is going to start getting tough.

There is going to be a gradual weeding out of those elements in French North Africa who are failing to give complete cooperation to the Allied cause there.

No Showdown

At the same time, however, there is going to be no toleration of any move to precipitate a French political showdown in North Africa which might endanger the Allied military campaign there.

Failure of the various French groups to postpone their political squabbling in North Africa until the axis has been driven out of Tunisia and Tripoli has created indignation in American military and diplomatic circles in Washington.

Considerable disappointment also prevails in authoritative quarters over the failure of the British government to move earlier in correcting the impression in London that Whitehall was at odds with Washington over the American handling of the situation in French North Africa.

London Group Blamed

It is feared that the criticism of American policy, which is believed to have been deliberately inspired by certain elements in London with ulterior motives, has been permitted to gain such headway that it may now be difficult to curtail.

American officials feel that the critics of the U. S. policy in French North Africa fail to appreciate the confused political situation that exists there, or the difficulties confronting the American authorities in handling it.

It is not a situation that can be cleared up overnight without the use of armed force that might precipitate a civil war, officials said. Furthermore, it is pointed out that American armed forces

Nips On Guadalcanal Face Experience Similar To Yanks At Bataan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 — Japanese troops on Guadalcanal today face slow starvation as the result of increasing American pressure and the U. S. sea-air blockade which has prevented the Nipponese from moving supplies into the area for more than two months.

Ironically, the isolated enemy forces on the embattled island are living through an experience similar to that which preceded the collapse of the American-Filipino army on Bataan in the Philippines, who finally were unable to carry on because of undernourishment and jungle fever.

Despite lack of news from the Solomons, navy men asserted that action is continuing in the South Pacific, with U. S. planes, surface vessels and ground forces stabbing at enemy troops and bases whenever possible.

These sources stated that the same is true in the Aleutians, where American army bombers have been blasting the Japs on Kiska whenever weather permits.

The last two months has been one of the longest periods of inactivity for the Japanese since the Solomons campaign began August 7. The last major Japanese assault on Guadalcanal ended in mid-November when a powerful enemy armada was smashed by American sea and air forces.

Since then the Japs have made several unsuccessful attempts to sneak reinforcements and supplies to their garrison on Guadalcanal, but American planes and surface ships have frustrated each move.

Meanwhile, U. S. submarines have been hammering at Japanese supply lines throughout the Pacific with astonishing success, further crippling the Japanese war effort at home and abroad.

While the lull in operations is giving the Japanese time to make repairs and to reassemble their fleet units, navy men pointed out that the period also is furnishing the American forces valuable time to consolidate their gains and to rush supplies into the area for the next clash.

As the result of smashing American victories in the South Pacific during October and November, the position of the United Nations has improved greatly whereas the Japs have been forced to act defensively while mapping plans for moves designed to offset their losses.

JAPANESE USE WOMEN PILOTS FOR WAR PLANES

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 16 — The Japanese are using women flyers in the southwest Pacific, it was learned today from a survivor of the U. S. aircraft carrier Hornet which was sunk off the Santa Cruz islands last October.

James H. Prince, 20, petty officer, third class, of Asbury Park said that medical officers of the carrier had established definitely that the suicide plane which dived into the Hornet's elevator shaft was piloted by a woman.

Gunners aboard the Hornet, Prince said, took a heavy toll of Japanese planes. He said that he himself accounted for six. He downed one with a five-inch gun and then blasted five more with a 22 mm rifle.

DR. BIGELOW DIES

COLUMBUS, Jan. 16 — Funeral arrangements were being completed today for Dr. Leslie Lawson Bigelow, 62, acting dean of the college of medicine at Ohio State University and acting director of University hospital who died in that institution last night.

Dr. Bigelow, who has been in ill health for several years, had been confined to the hospital for two weeks with a heart ailment. Prominent as a surgeon and medical educator, Dr. Bigelow was a member of the faculty at Ohio State university for 28 years.

APPENDIX OF THREE-DA-Y-OLD BABY REMOVED

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 — Medical authorities today studied one of the few appendectomies on record involving the case of a new born baby.

The operation was performed on the three-day-old infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Magnus at Mount Sinai hospital, according to Dr. Stephen Mannheimer, resident physician.

Symptoms of the affliction, he said, were the same as those with adults — fever and soreness around the affected area.

The child — not yet named — is apparently recovering, Dr. Mannheimer added.

HERE'S HOW AXIS HEEDS SYMBOL OF RED CROSS

Just as in the previous three and a half years of war, the Axis continues to ignore the rules of decency in warfare. The Red Cross, international symbol of mercy, is to them just a target upon which to practice their marksmanship with bombs and bullets without danger of the fire's being returned from the undefended hospital, first aid station, hospital train or ship. The ambulance train pictured above was plainly marked with the Red Cross but was bombed and strafed by German flyers in Tunisia, anyhow.

Actor Amazed As Trial Halts Pending Probe Of Jurors' Prejudice

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16 — Frances Farmer, on top of the world as a movie star until a few months ago, was in the psychopathic ward of the General hospital today. She awaited a sanity hearing after playing her most tragic scene, not as an actress but as a plain human being whose fortunes have turned completely bad.

In sharp contrast to the fighting and kicking and total lack of restraint that had characterized her two days in jail after a Santa Monica police judge had sentenced her to 180 days for violating a drunk driving parole, the scene was played with subdued emotions, which accentuated, rather than diminished, its dramatic impact.

Mrs. Smith was sitting in the store when the couple appeared. The man asked for gasoline and, told that there was none available said: "Then give me your money."

The robber pulled a revolver part way from his pocket, Mrs. Smith describing it as a nickel-plated gun.

Following orders from the gunman, Mrs. Smith took $12 from the cash register and emptied $58 from her purse which was lying on top of the cash register.

While the money was being turned over the woman stood at an open door leading to Mrs. Smith's residence. She was not armed.

Mrs. Smith was told to remain behind the counter while the couple escaped in an automobile which had been parked in the dark.

It occurred as the actress, quiet and composed for the first time since her arrest, was being taken by automobile to the hospital by five deputy sheriffs.

"I know where you're taking me," she said to Deputy Vivienne Hossack as the car made its way through traffic. "You're taking me to the psychopathic ward."

She paused momentarily and then added:

"That's the graveyard of human beings."

Miss Farmer was committed to the hospital on a warrant signed by Dr. Thomas H. Leonard, General hospital psychiatrist, who police say has a prison record, was held today for questioning in connection with the strangulation murder of Mrs. Sybilla McGrath, 26-year-old mother of six small children.

The affidavits by three members of the panel from which the Flynn jury of nine women and three men was chosen were submitted by Hopkins to Superior Judge Leslie E. Still.

Judge Still immediately adjourned court until Monday, when arguments on the mistrial motion will be heard. The jury was instructed to return at that time.

One of the affidavits, signed by Mrs. Harriet Ponder, asserted that Mrs. Boehm left the jury room for a peek at the dashing actor in the corridor. When she returned, Mrs. Ponder added, Mrs. Boehm said:

"I'm for Flynn in a big way."

The affidavits of Mrs. Emily S. Blue and Mrs. Gussie A. Rowe, who were dismissed during the jury selection process by peremptory challenge, attributed to Miss Forbes the oft-repeated statement:

"I just must get on that jury. I don't know what I'll do if I don't get on that jury."

The women said Miss Forbes remarked that she would not convict the Tasmanian-born star of the charges leveled against him by blonde Betty Hansen, 17, and 16-year-old Peggy Larue Satterlee.

Germans Also Take Heavy Blows On Eastern Front As Reds Surge Ahead

"The enemy is hemmed in and doomed," he declared. "This is the final act of the Stalingrad drama."

Another "last act" appeared developing in New Guinea as allied ground forces closed in on the Japanese invasion remnants on the Papuan coast and cracked their main defenses. After the battle more than 150 Japanese bodies were counted.

Recent estimates placed the number of Japanese troops on Sanananda point at no more than 500 to 600—the fragmentary remains of an original invasion force of 15,000 which drove to within 35 miles of the allied base at Port Moresby.

As hardened American and Australian jungle fighters closed in on the strongly entrenched enemy forces at Sanananda point, allied bombers and fighters continued their devastating attacks on enemy bases in the Lae-Salamaua district, 125 miles to the north, and on New Britain island to the east of New Guinea.

The hull in ground fighting continued in North Africa, but allied air and sea forces struck telling blows at the enemy. British submarines sank three axis ships and damaged three others in recent attacks, while American and British bombers continued heavy assaults on the Eastern Tunisian ports of Sfax and Gabes.

Evidence that allied forces are flowing into Africa came in a Lisbon dispatch which reported that a squadron of 50 American fighter planes was sighted over Portugal yesterday en route to North Africa. Eleven of the planes were said to have been interned after being forced down by a lack of fuel.

FARM AND TAX WORRY LEADS TO MURDER, SUICIDE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Jan. 16—Arthur Ruchoff, 58, a farmer, beat his mother in law to death with a hammer, seriously injured his wife and son with the same weapon and then killed himself with a shotgun.

Buder said that Ruchoff had been complaining to his family about increased income tax payments and his inability to get farm machinery "without filling out long blanks."

George Isaac, 52-year-old hired hand, told Buder that he discovered his employer's body and the unconscious family when he returned from an errand in Schoolcraft, three miles from the farm.

Mrs. Minnie Beebe, 81, Ruchoff's mother-in-law died in Kalamazoo hospital from the effects of the beating while Mrs. Ruchoff, 59, was given a 50-50 chance of living. The son, Lyle, 20, was reported to be in less serious condition than his mother.

Highly respected in the community, the Ruchoffs had lived on the same farm for 27 years. Buder said.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS BERRY

Ground Feed.

I was on a farm this morning when a feed dealer called and said that he would be back in about an hour, and that if the corn that was to be used for a part of the balanced ration for the growing pigs and chickens was sacked by the time he returned, that he would pick it up, and get it back in time for the evening feed.

Only a generation ago the pigs on that farm, and on most of those in the community, would have been eating "nubbins" or possibly some shelled corn; and the chickens would have had ear corn and some water, with possibly a little wheat fed with the corn for variety. The porkers would have been on the farm for eight or nine months, and often almost a year, and the chickens would have done most of their laying in the Spring of the year, when robins and bluebirds and most every other feathered creature has the biological urge to lay some eggs, and perpetuate the species.

We have made a lot of progress in leading our livestock on home grains, balanced with a protein supplement, or with most of the protein that is produced on the farm, like alfalfa hay and ground soy beans.

The improvement in feeding has been accompanied by a widening of the margin of profit, too, in most cases.

Sow Some Timothy With Your Bulbs.

That's a suggestion I recently got in a southern Ohio home, when we were admiring a low flat dish in which some narcissus bulbs, were about large enough to bloom, and there was a fine sod of green around them, growing in the fine pebbles and sand, in which they were planted.

This touch of green in the low vase added much to the picture.

A Windbreak Of Fodder

I just saw that in Brown county and the cattle and a few hens were making good use of it, on a cold windy day.

If the wind sweeps around the barn and you do not have a windbreak to protect the livestock try making one of bundled fodder along the barnlot fence.

FRANCES CALMS DOWN IN CELL

(Continued from Page One) I learned this week of an electric chicken picker, that is used by a large Ohio firm, producing broilers for a city market. You scald the broiler, hold one side of it close to the picker, then the other side, and then move it around a little to get the few remaining feathers, and you are all ready to pick another chicken, is the way a friend described it. "You can pick a chicken in less than a minute and do a very good job," she added.

This machine is invaluable in this day of short help in the poultry business.

A machine we need now is a chicken feeder and an egg gatherer that will take care of a farm flock, without the owner even going into the building, where they are housed. Such a machine would soon become popular.

While a machine like this sounds a bit fanciful and impossible, one doesn't need to be surprised if it is soon on the market. You can scarcely imagine some machine that may not be made in this day of accelerated inventions, due to the necessity of having them as a war measure.

Lights In Poultry Houses

I got some accurate figures this week on the value of having the laying house lighted, so as to increase the length of the day of a laying hen, that should be about 12 hours, and some authorities say 14 hours.

A friend has two flocks of chickens. One of 118 Leghorn hens laid 72 eggs the day I called, and the other of 110 hens laid 46 eggs. "All conditions were about the same, except the lighting," the owner explained. "The flock that had the best had a 25 watt bulb on them from four o'clock until daylight, and the other didn't. The only additional cost was 25 watt bulb and the little current required to light it" he continued.

Then he explained that the flock had been producing at about that rate for several weeks. Of course he will wire the low producing house just as soon as "Uncle Sam" will let him purchase the wire to make the extension of the electric line.

Why shouldn't he and a lot of other farmers who need some outside wiring be allowed to buy it? My opinion is that they will, for as we discover some weaknesses in our rationing system, we hasten to correct them. That's a democracy at work, serving the needs of the citizens as a group.

Make Light Changes On A Laying Flock Gradually

That's the advice of a very successful farmer who pushes laying hens pretty hard, as a major enterprise in a general system of farming. He says that he has found that it is a good plan to begin using lights in the early Fall, about the time the flock is housed, instead of waiting until late in November, and even in December as is done on some farms, and then putting the lights on at once and lengthening the working day at least two hours, by having the lights come on at four o'clock, thus rousing the hens two hours sooner than they are in the habit of getting up to start the work of the day. "Such an abrupt change on a high producing flock may and often does throw them into a moulting, with all the hazard there is in that" he explained.

This man has been in the poultry business for almost a quarter of a century, and he has learned

But Thayden, president of a United Steelworkers' local, appeared on the platform to make his speech of acceptance. Later he explained he and a shop steward had been fired for allegedly advising other workers to "take it easy and don't work too hard."

Today Thayden and the other man were back at work pending an investigation.

PARLEY AIMS AT ENDING STRIKE OF CANADIANS

OTTAWA, Jan. 16—With two-thirds of Canada's steel production tied up by the strike of 13,500 workers, representatives of management and labor were to meet here today with Dominion Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell in an endeavor to settle a wage dispute.

If you are getting some soft shelled eggs, try adding some to the laying mash, but be sure to use the finely ground shell in order to get the best results.

A Windbreak Of Fodder

I just saw that in Brown county and the cattle and a few hens were making good use of it, on a cold windy day.

If the wind sweeps around the barn and you do not have a windbreak to protect the livestock try making one of bundled fodder along the barnlot fence.

(Continued from Page One) I learned this week of an electric chicken picker, that is used by a large Ohio firm, producing broilers for a city market. You scald the broiler, hold one side of it close to the picker, then the other side, and then move it around a little to get the few remaining feathers, and you are all ready to pick another chicken, is the way a friend described it. "You can pick a chicken in less than a minute and do a very good job," she added.

This machine is invaluable in this day of short help in the poultry business.

A machine we need now is a chicken feeder and an egg gatherer that will take care of a farm flock, without the owner even going into the building, where they are housed. Such a machine would soon become popular.

"The enemy is hemmed in and doomed," he declared. "This is the final act of the Stalingrad drama."

Another "last act" appeared developing in New Guinea as allied ground forces closed in on the Japanese invasion remnants on the Papuan coast and cracked their main defenses. After the battle more than 150 Japanese bodies were counted.

Recent estimates placed the number of Japanese troops on Sanananda point at no more than 500 to 600—the fragmentary remains of an original invasion force of 15,000 which drove to within 35 miles of the allied base at Port Moresby.

As hardened American and Australian jungle fighters closed in on the strongly entrenched enemy forces at Sanananda point, allied bombers and fighters continued their devastating attacks on enemy bases in the Lae-Salamaua district, 125 miles to the north, and on New Britain island to the east of New Guinea.

The lull in ground fighting continued in North Africa, but allied air and sea forces struck telling blows at the enemy. British submarines sank three axis ships and damaged three others in recent attacks, while American and British bombers continued heavy assaults on the Eastern Tunisian ports of Sfax and Gabes.

Evidence that allied forces are flowing into Africa came in a Lisbon dispatch which reported that a squadron of 50 American fighter planes was sighted over Portugal yesterday en route to North Africa. Eleven of the planes were said to have been interned after being forced down by a lack of fuel.

FARM AND TAX WORRY LEADS TO MURDER, SUICIDE

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Jan. 16—Arthur Ruchoff, 58, a farmer, beat his mother in law to death with a hammer, seriously injured his wife and son with the same weapon and then killed himself with shotgun.

Buder said that Ruchoff had been complaining to his family about increased income tax payments and his inability to get farm machinery "without filling out long blanks."

George Isaac, 52-year-old hired hand, told Buder that he discovered his employer's body and the unconscious family when he returned from an errand in Schoolcraft, three miles from the farm.

Mrs. Minnie Beebe, 81, Ruchoff's mother-in-law died in Kalamazoo hospital from the effects of the heating while Mrs. Ruchoff, 59, was given a 50-50 chance of living. The son, Lyle, 20, was reported to be in less serious condition than his mother.

Highly respected in the community, the Ruchoffs had lived on the same farm for 27 years. Buder said.

Farming in Southern Ohio

BY THOMAS BERRY

Ground Feed.

I was on a farm this morning when a feed dealer called and said that he would be back in about an hour, and that if the corn that was to be used for a part of the balanced ration for the growing pigs and chickens was sacked by the time he returned, that he would pick it up, and get it back in time for the evening feed.

Only a generation ago the pigs on that farm, and on most of those in the community, would have been eating "nubbins" or possibly some shelled corn, and the chickens would have had ear corn and some water, with possibly a little wheat fed with the corn for variety. The porkers would have been on the farm for eight or nine months, and often almost a year, and the chickens would have done most of their laying in the Spring of the year, when robins and bluebirds and most every other feathered creature has the biological urge to lay some eggs, and perpetuate the species.

We have made a lot of progress in leading our livestock on home grains, balanced with a protein supplement, or with most of the protein that is produced on the farm, like alfalfa hay and ground soy beans.

The improvement in feeding has been accompanied by a widening of the margin of profit, too, in most cases.

Sow Some Timothy With Your Bulbs.

That's a suggestion I recently got in a southern Ohio home, when we were admiring a low flat dish in which some narcissus bulbs were about large enough to bloom, and there was a fine sod of green around them, growing in the fine pebbles and sand, in which they were planted.

This touch of green in the low vase added much to the picture.

The physician quoted her as telling him, "I hear voices day and night and they bother me" and "people are putting things in my food and drink and this caused me to be ill and distract."

He said that while alcohol may have aggravated her mental condition, it has been established that drink was not the deciding factor.

"She needs all of the friends she ever had at the present time," he added.

A machine we need now is a chicken feeder and an egg gatherer that will take care of a farm flock, without the owner even going into the building, where they are housed. Such a machine would soon become popular.

While a machine like this sounds a bit fanciful and impossible, one doesn't need to be surprised if it is soon on the market. You can scarcely imagine some machine that may not be made in this day of accelerated inventions, due to the necessity of having them as a war measure.

Lights In Poultry Houses

I got some accurate figures this week on the value of having the laying house lighted, so as to increase the length of the day of a laying hen, that should be about 12 hours, and some authorities say 14 hours.

A friend has two flocks of chickens. One of 118 Leghorn hens laid 72 eggs a day I called, and the other of 110 hens laid 46 eggs. "All conditions were about the same, except the lighting," the owner explained. "The flock that laid the best had a 25 watt bulb on them from four o'clock until daylight, and the other didn't. The only additional cost was a 25 watt bulb and the little current required to light it," he continued.

Then he explained that the flocks had been producing at about that rate for several weeks. Of course he will wire the low producing house, just as soon as "Uncle Sam" will let him purchase the wire to make the extension of the electric line.

Why shouldn't he and a lot of other farmers who need some outside wiring be allowed to buy it? My opinion is that they will, as we discover some weaknesses in our rationing system, we hasten to correct them. That's a democracy at work, serving the needs of the citizens as a group.

Make Light Changes On A Laying Flock Gradually

That's the advice of a very successful farmer who pushes his hens pretty hard, as a major enterprise in a general system of farming. He says that he has found that it is a good plan to begin using lights in the early Fall, about the time the flock is housed, instead of waiting until late in November, and even in December as is done on some farms, and then putting the lights on at once and lengthening the working day at least two hours, by having the lights come on at four o'clock, thus rousing the hens two hours sooner than they are in the habit of getting up to start the work of the day. "Such an abrupt change on a high producing flock may often does throw them into a molt, with all of the hazard there is in that," he explained.

This man has been in the poultry business for almost a quarter of a century, and he has learned

Today Thayden and the other man were back at work pending an investigation.

PARLEY AIMS AT ENDING STRIKE OF CANADIANS

OTTAWA, Jan. 16—With two-thirds of Canada's steel production tied up by the strike of 13,500 workers, representatives of management and labor were to meet here today with Dominion Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell in an endeavor to settle a wage dispute.

Also in attendance, it was expected, would be members of the cabinet and a special delegation of international representatives of the United Steel Workers of America. The latter, it was understood, had been appointed by Philip Murray following appeals made to him yesterday and the day before by Mitchell.

The strike, now in its fifth day, began when workers now receiving between 43 1/2 and 45 1/2 cents an hour demanded a 55-cent minimum.

The request was rejected by a special government labor commission, whose findings Mitchell supported.

Steel workers, the labor minister said, already are receiving a minimum of 60 cents an hour if their special "cost of living" bonuses are taken into consideration.

DISGUST SHOWN OVER SNIPPING AT EISENHOWER

Certain British And French Elements Likely To Meet Trouble

(Continued from Page One) did not move into French North Africa for the purpose of purifying French politics there. They landed there to help the British eighth army drive the axis out of North Africa.

Regarded as Ally

French North Africa, officials added, is not regarded by the United States as a conquered territory, but as a sovereign ally. If the American military authorities were to carry out the immediate political purification of French Africa to the extent demanded by the Fighting French, officials say Gen. Eisenhower would need twice the number of troops he has now to occupy and administer the territory.

The American policy remains one of accepting the cooperation of those Frenchmen in North Africa who are willing to help smash the axis. It is realized that there are some elements there, including high military and political personages, who are putting their personal ambitions above that of cooperation with Eisenhower. These elements are going to be weeded out gradually, but any attempt to carry out an immediate wholesale purge, officials believe, would create internal disorders that might seriously endanger the American military campaign.

"If we get on the Flynn jury, we'll fix him, won't we, Mrs. Ponder?"

On other occasions, Mrs. Ponder added, Miss Forbes substituted the very "convict" for the verb "fix."

Frankly confused by the sensational turn of events, Flynn signed when told it might mean starting the trial over again.

He was disturbed, however, by the affidavit charging to Miss Forbes, prior to her selection as the number five juror, a desire to convict him.

"After being advised that one of the jurors was set to 'fix' me before she heard the evidence," Flynn said, "my only hope now, when this thing is over, is to sink back into the obscurity from which I emerged."

Chief Defense Counsel Jerry Giesler told Judge Still "this is the first intimation I had on any such intended motion."

Judge Still admitted it was an equal surprise to him, and Giesler then hinted he might ask a continuance beyond Monday to argue the mistrial motion.

"Naturally, I will have to have appropriate time to determine what showing we would like to make," Giesler said.

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 17 is John 4:1-42, the Golden Text being John 4:36, "He that receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal.")

IN THIS lesson we are with Jesus in Samaria, where He and His disciples tarried on their way to Galilee. The Samaritans and Jews hated each other, and many Jews would not pass through that part of the country, although it was a direct road to Galilee. They would rather cross the Jordan river twice and make a goodly tour than pass that way.

Jesus, however, seems to have had no such scruples. He and His disciples took the great North road, and at noon they came to Jacob's well, near the city of Sychar. His disciples went to the city to get food, and Jesus, tired with the journey, rested at the well.

To the well came a woman of Samaria, and Jesus asked her if she would give Him a drink. "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?" she answered.

Would Give Living Water

Jesus' answer was: "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldst have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water."

The woman asked Jesus to give her that water, "that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." She evidently thought it some magic potion that would relieve her of thirst for the rest of her life. Of course it was not physical thirst Jesus meant, but spiritual, the acceptance of the message He had brought satisfying the thirsty soul and making it thereafter free from thirst.

Jesus' answer was: "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again. But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—John 4:1-42.

After Jesus talked to the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well, she went into the city and told the men she had talked with Christ.

The disciples came back and begged Him to eat, but He refused, saying that He had meat to eat that they knew not of; and they were puzzled.

When the Samaritans were told of Jesus by the woman, they went to Him and begged Him to stay with them, and He stayed two days.

Many of the Samaritans believed in Jesus because of His own words, and in two days He departed and went to Galilee.

Public Morale Defined As Guts by Minister

"Public morale" is a high flown and fancy expression much used and misused in these trying days, orators and writers labor over definition in promotional efforts, but "public morale" boiled down to the essence is best described by one rough and homely word—guts," so said the Rev. N. H. Peterson in addressing a Chamber of Commerce meeting Friday night. "Our boys on the firing line have more than enough guts to win this war; it is yet to be determined whether the stay-at-homes comes they are here, he told us he was the same identical boy who once tried to set type for us nearly forty years ago and the letters wouldn't stay put very well for him and after a few weeks of try and worry, concluded a print shop wasn't his size and quit the job with no bad marks against him. This "lad" we're telling you about is Grant Sines, now in the farm game over on the Schiff place somewhere in Darbyville territory and likes his job keeping the pigs, cows and all in their place. If and when it ever quits snowing every day and the birds get to doing their stuff again, we're going over to see for ourselves what kind of a job this once print'er boy, really is doing on the farm.

GAS AND OIL FAMINE

THE gasoline and fuel oil shortage in a strip of 17 states running about parallel to the eastern seaboard not only inconveniences those states but alarms states farther west.

For the present, at least, in most of the latter group there is no reason for worry. The crisis is not one of production but of transportation. There is said to be plenty of gas and oil in the mid-continent areas and also in most of the western states. But how long such a fortunate condition will continue is uncertain.

One fact that has to be taken into account is the public state of mind. Eastern states are said to be resentful because, while they are enduring severe hardships in such matters, the other states are well supplied. Many of the complainers argue that "all states should be treated alike" regardless of regional conditions.

But surely it would not be logical, or fair, to deprive western and mid-western states of their own fuel for their cars and heating systems, merely because it was impossible to transport to the eastern states all that they required. It has never been an American policy to enlarge scarcities deliberately in order to make people in less fortunate areas feel better. The logical remedy is to enlarge transportation systems, and progress is being made along that line.

GREECE STILL FIGHTS

A GROUP of young Americans of Greek origin, all of whom have entered American service, at a dinner the other night received this message from a commander of the Greek Royal Air Force, which still fights on in other countries.

"The Greek people," said the message, "loved freedom as much as you do, but they lost it. You must not lose it. Fight hard, boys, and keep America free." There need be no doubt that, with their heritage, they will do it.

It should never be forgotten, in spite of the sad plight of present-day Greece, and the many long periods of subjection and slavery endured by the Greek people in the last 2,500 years, that they first gave the world social and political freedom, and that their free spirit and ideals have never been lost. Neither should their impress on American life and institutions be overlooked. The very word "democracy" is pure Greek, and the statesmen who fought the American Revolution and wrote the Constitution took their inspiration and ideals mainly from Greece.

It may be just as well to give dreamers like Henry Wallace a chance. "Without vision the people perish."

SQUABBLE DISTURBS HARMONY

WASHINGTON — Republican leader Charles McNary's report to the press that the Senate GOP caucus "dripped with harmony" caused some good-natured grins among McNary's colleagues who attended the caucus.

In his zeal to promote party interests, the charming Oregonian neglected to mention a bristling set-to between himself and Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire over GOP representation on the important Foreign Relations Committee.

During the past session the Republicans had seven members on the Foreign Relations Committee, against 16 Democrats. However, the GOP was holding out for a 14-9 alignment this session because of Republican increases in the Senate. So there was some disappointment when McNary informed the caucus that the committee makeup was to be 15-8; instead of 14-9.

Bridges and other non-isolationists hoped to place able, far-sighted Senator Warren Austin of Vermont on the committee. However, with one vacancy instead of two, this was difficult, because isolationist Senator James Davis of Pennsylvania, another candidate, had seniority over Austin.

INSIDE ISOLATIONIST DEAL

Bridges made no effort to conceal his indignation. He hotly demanded of McNary:

"I would like the Minority Leader to explain why we are going to have only one extra seat, when by all rights we should have two."

"That was my agreement with Senator Barkley and it has the approval of the Republican Committee on Committees," replied McNary. "Senator Barkley has assured me that the next Democratic vacancy on the Foreign Relations Committee will go to us. That's the understanding."

"But the makeup was supposed to be 14 Democrats and 9 Republicans," persisted Bridges. "Instead of gaining two seats, as we should, we are actually losing one and the Democrats are gaining one. I would like to know why the Senator from Oregon made such an agreement."

"I don't like to be questioned in this way," snapped McNary. "My judgment on such matters has never been questioned in the past."

"I have a right to speak up over something that affects the interests of our party," shot back Bridges. "I guess there's nothing we can do about this now, but I, for one, am not satisfied."

Insiders see the fine hand of Senator Gerald Nye, North Dakota isolationist, in the by-passing of Austin. As chairman of the GOP Committee on Committees, Nye has a powerful voice in GOP committee appointments. With the appointment of Davis, the entire GOP roster on the Foreign Relations Committee continues to be isolationist, with the possible exception of fence-straddling Wallace White of Maine.

NOTE: From the viewpoint of isolationist Republicans it was better to have one new isolationist Republican on the Committee, than two new Republicans, one of whom believes in world cooperation.

Sulfadiazine Best Ally In Fight On Pneumonia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THIS IS pneumonia weather and we are moving into the seasonal peak period of this once-dreaded disease. We face it with a great deal more confidence in our ability to control it than ever

Dr. Cledenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Before 1920 the mortality from pneumonia was about 30 to 40 per cent; in 1930 it was about 20 to 25 per cent, but in the last few years it has dropped to 7 per cent.

This 7 per cent includes old people, children, invalids very sick with other diseases, and those who have been neglected in the early stages of exposure to inclement weather after the infection got started. The mortality in this group, therefore, can hardly be reduced.

Pneumonia has been called the old man's friend because it removes him from the earth when life becomes a burden, and there is such a thing as terminal pneumonia, which occurs in cancer and heart disease and which is really a blessing in disguise.

Mortality of Pneumonia

This great change in the mortality of pneumonia has been brought about entirely by the use of the new sulfa compounds, which really work wonders in pneumonia.

The reduction in mortality between 1920 and 1930 was due probably to the use of oxygen and the use of anti-pneumococcal serum, but neither of these, or both combined, is as successful as the use of one of the sulfa compounds alone.

As a matter of fact, except for rest and nursing care, in most of the hospitals with which I am acquainted, nothing is done for the pneumonia patients except to stop its activity. The patient's own immune processes then come to the rescue and kill or remove the germ from the body. These drugs have fulfilled an old dream of the medical profession: to obtain a chemical which will be antagonistic to germ life and not harmful to the human host.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. L. B.: Is there any harm in a young woman with rheumatic carditis and enlarged heart having a baby? She is in perfect health otherwise.

Answer: There have been many instances of women with rheumatic heart disease who have had several babies without any harm to the heart. However, she should request a doctor's advice.

He was perspiring when he again lay down on his bed. Faced with a new self-accusation, he knew he was afraid of Eugenia. How dreadful! To be afraid of such a fragile, blond Eugenia. But why not? RESTWICK CARNES' heart gave a thud. "Choppo, you mean you walked on the outside of the railing."

"Sure, I knew if this buttercup could do it, I could too. I'm glad," he said again. "I'm glad I listened. Abby says it's bad. She won't ever let me tell her anything I find out that way. I tried to tell her. Well, Rusty, I'll take a paddling now, but you'll never make me sorry." His eyes swum to Eugenia. He terminated defiantly. "I know what you are."

"Fantastic!" cried the girl. "Really, Rusty, if you believe those detestable lies you're not sane. I'm beginning to think they took your brains instead of your blood."

"None, Choppo. You did exactly right. I'd have found out some time. Trouble is I didn't find out soon enough." He began barking at the child to take the dismal look of his freckled face. "Get up from there. Get some blue paper on the flashlight for the blackout. It's practically dark already."

While the child dashed about, delightedly carrying out his idol's orders, Restwick Carnes reached for the telephone.

"I know you're not sending cables yet, but as soon as you are, send this one to my wife, care of the Riverview Hotel in Reno, Nev. Message, 'Tell Abby that Choppo WAS going. He'd locked his doors last night. He knew he had to keep Choppo with him until Eugenia could get away from Honolulu. Gruffly he changed his order. 'Maybe you'd better come along. I don't want you to worry the hotel employees silly.'

The darkness brought quiet and unreality. No lamp-lit terrace dining room. No music. No singers with guitars playing for the hotel hula dancers.

As did every adult in Hawaii that night, Restwick Carnes lay waiting for the dawn. Though his body ached for sleep, his furrowed mind kept that solace from him. And the shameful fears that had pestered him during the day returned, their haunting now twice as ghastly because of his knowledge of Eugenia's guilt.

Glimpsing her true ugliness had been like death. It had been worse than death. If she were dead he'd never have to see her again. As it was, he might. And he couldn't bear it. There was something about her, something so horrible. Suddenly he was on his feet, groping his way to the hall door. He closed and bolted the wooden one, not depending, as was customary in that tropical climate, on the locked screen doors. After several minutes of grievous weeping he turned his head to look at his little companion. The child had not moved. He had expression Rusty had seen in the eyes of puppies who feel they've done something wrong. "Guess I should have kept my trap shut like Abby said. Then you'd have been as happy with the buttercup as if nothing had ever happened."

Mortality of Pneumonia

This great change in the mortality of pneumonia has been brought about entirely by the use of the new sulfa compounds, which really work wonders in pneumonia.

The reduction in mortality between 1920 and 1930 was due probably to the use of oxygen and the use of anti-pneumococcal serum, but neither of these, or both combined, is as successful as the use of one of the sulfa compounds alone.

As a matter of fact, except for rest and nursing care, in most of the hospitals with which I am acquainted, nothing is done for the pneumonia patients except to give them good doses of the sulfa drugs with the calm expectation that they will nearly always recover.

The sulphonamide drugs were introduced into practice about 1935. The first one to be used was called prontosil, which was a colloid. This

Ashville Garden Club Honors Nelle Oesterle

Linen Shower Replaces Loss In Fire

Ashville Garden club honored Miss Nelle Oesterle at a linen shower during the social hour at the close of the business meeting. The party was at the home of Mrs. C. J. Rockey and the shower was planned to replenish Miss Oesterle's stock of household linen which was lost in the fire that destroyed the family home in December.

The many thoughtful gifts were opened by the honor guest during the time usually devoted to the monthly program.

Mrs. Harold Silbaugh conducted the session in the absence of Mrs. George D. McDowell who was temporarily incapacitated by fall as she left her home to attend the affair.

About 25 members enjoyed the delightful evening and the guests included Mrs. Edwin Irwin, Mrs. Stanley Bowers, Mrs. Laura Courtright, Miss Flora Peters and Miss Wilma Jean Whitehead.

The next meeting, Thursday, February 11, at 2:30 p. m. will be at the home of Mrs. L. C. Schiff, Ashville.

Wayne Advisory Council

WOMEN AT WAR

Rosebud

Rosebud is eight, and the most beautiful shade of caramel fudge. To her loving Mammy and Pappy she is known, on approximately alternate days, as "Angel" and "You devil child". It was on her devilish days that Rosebud tied the knots in the shirts that Mammy had taken in for washing, and poured the whole of the vanilla bottle into the lamb stew, just as she said later through bitter tears, to "flavor it up some".

On her angel days Rosebud is equally imaginative even if a more restful occupant of the little shack down on Vinegar Hill. Once when Mammy was out doing day work, Rosebud got a wave of cleaning fever and scoured every pot and pan in the kitchen so that they literally glistened. Another day, left alone, she tidied up Mammy's and Pappy's room to such a point of apple-pie order that it was a week before Pappy could find an undershirt.

Rosebud is a great reader of the newspapers. Mammy and Pappy don't take one, but there are plenty of good newspapers blowing round Vinegar Hill. It was out of one of them that Rosebud got her idea for spending the ten cents the Bunny had put under her pillow the night her tooth came out. After breakfasts Rosebud disappeared down the Hill and reappeared soon after with a beautiful ten-cent War Stamp pasted firmly into a brand-new book with neat little squares for more stamps. She displayed her investment to Mammy. "I declare you're an angel child," Mammy said. Rosebud went on sitting on the kitchen floor staring with large brown eyes at the empty squares in her book. From time to time she took hold of one or another of her teeth and wiggled it gently.

Mammy was engrossed in a particularly big washing. Rosebud was as quiet as a mouse and Mammy forgot about her until, coming in from the yard with her arms full of dry sheets, she encountered her child with a large hammer in her hand. Scolding the devil in her angel child, Mammy shouted at her, "Rosebud! Come vere with that hammer! What you planning on doing?" But what was done was done. In Rosebud's other hand was another tooth. Her mouth was stretched in a broad if slightly bloody smile. "I ain't doing nothing, Mammy," she said. "I just filling up my stamp book."

Meantime, the Dodgers have no assurance whatever that some of them won't be killed by falling skiers. Things are bad enough as it is with 15 of Rickey's men lost and no replacements coming up.

Streamlined Program Planned by County Farm Bureau.

WAR-TIME NEEDS TO BE STUDIED BY PRODUCERS

Local Agricultural Role Will Be Outlined In Session January 29

BANQUET IS ABANDONED

Organization Falls In Line With National Trend Of Conservation

Annual meeting of the Pickaway county Farm Bureau, scheduled Friday, January 29, will be streamlined to conform with wartime programs, all frills and fancies of previous annual sessions being eliminated by a representative committee from all the Farm Bureau's affiliated units.

Objective of the session will be to instruct members of the organization concerning war-time needs in production and parts they may play in helping Uncle Sam reach unprecedented goals in total output of foodstuffs.

The meeting will be held in Memorial Hall starting at 11 a. m. when the business meeting will get under way under direction of Turney M. Glick, Farm Bureau president.

Banquet Dropped

First feature of the event to be changed will be the matter of food, no banquet being planned. A barbecue lunch will be served at noon in the hall, free to all members of the organization. Annually, up to now, the banquet has been one of the highlights of the day's program, it coming in the evening with elaborate arrangements made. But this year, Farm Bureau officials have decided that things are different, so they are conforming with a conservative trend.

Prior to the lunch, Howard Dawson, extension specialist in swins at Ohio State university, will speak.

Following the lunch the program will be resumed with a play showing women in war work being planned by Mrs. Fannie Brooks, AAA farmer fieldwoman.

Speakers Scheduled

Speakers scheduled for the afternoon are L. K. Bear, sheep specialist, and L. P. McCann, beef specialist at Ohio State university. Both men are rated highly in their fields and their addresses are expected to be of much interest to the farm group.

Reports of Farm Bureau business and the amount of business transacted by the various affiliated organizations will also be heard in the afternoon. Records were established during 1942 in all branches of the bureau's work, it has been announced, but figures concerning volume of operation will not be announced until the annual meeting.

Committee planning the session includes Lawrence Liston, chairman; H. C. Hines, F. K. Blair, Charles Rose, Howard Huston, C. E. Dick, Mrs. Herman Berger and Miss Mary Shortridge.

Letters from the War Production Board have been received by Pickaway county commissioners, common pleas judge and court clerk calling attention to the government's need for typewriters built since January 1, 1935, for service in various camps and for other purposes.

The letter asked the court of officials to check over typewriters and to prepare to sell any which can be spared. The government will set a purchase price to be determined by the model and serial number of the machine.

Typewriters built before January 1, 1935, carry serial numbers lower than 4,800,000.

WPB reports that it need 600,000 typewriters at once, and that unless they are made available machines will have to be requisitioned.

Government typewriter agencies have been set up throughout the country with the Chillicothe Typewriter company being the agent nearest Circleville. There are 11 such agencies in Columbus.

General Pickett of Gettysburg fame was, after the Civil war, in life insurance business and died in Norfolk, Va., in 1875.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

ONE MINUTE PULPIT
Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth. —Proverbs 27:1.

Donna Lee Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Reid of Jackson, O., is resting well after undergoing an appendicitis operation Thursday in Grant hospital, Columbus. The Reids formerly lived in Circleville when Mr. Reid was affiliated with the City Loan Co.

Mrs. Harley Noggle, East Main street, who submitted to major surgery Friday in Berger hospital, is resting well.

Mrs. Charles Gray of Circleville, the former Eleanor Radcliff, is making a good recovery in Grant hospital, Columbus, after a major operation performed a week ago.

FISHERMEN GET BREAK BY OPEN SEASON SPLIT

Pickaway county bass fishermen will start to check through their tackle this weekend in preparation for a season of sport which is made to order for them, providing they can find transportation.

State conservation officials, meeting Friday, agreed on a separation of the state for black bass fishing with different dates being applied for the north and the south halves of Ohio. The dividing line is Route 35 from the Indiana line to Chillicothe and Route 50 from Chillicothe to Athens.

Because of earlier spawning season in southern Ohio, closed season for black bass in the section south of Routes 35 and 50 will be from April 15 to May 31, and in the northern half from May 1 to June 15.

Because Pickaway county is located just north of the dividing line its fishermen will be able to seek black bass north and south of the line, the split being a convenient one for local rodsman.

TROUT season will be closed from September 16 to April 16, the same as last year.

Several additional lakes have been added to the open list by the conservation department, only ones remaining closed being Stewart Hollow lake, owned by the division; a new recently-filled lake in Ross county, Harrison lake in Fulton county and Spotts lake in Henry county.

COUNTY RECEIVES PLEA FOR USED TYPEWRITERS

Letters from the War Production Board have been received by Pickaway county commissioners, common pleas judge and court clerk calling attention to the government's need for typewriters built since January 1, 1935, for service in various camps and for other purposes.

MAN MISSING SINCE 1921 MAY BE DECLARED DEAD

Petition seeking to have Howard Kirkpatrick, formerly of Perry township, declared legally dead was filed Friday in probate court by his daughter, Mrs. Kathryn K. Groom of Louisville, Ky.

The petition declares that Mr. Kirkpatrick was last seen in Pickaway county June 8, 1921, and that he should be presumed dead.

Appointment of an administrator of his estate is requested in the petition.

Mr. Kirkpatrick had one other child, a son, John, who lives in Washington D. C.

Judge Lemuel B. Weldon has fixed March 1, 1943, at 9 a. m. for the hearing.

WITH LOCAL BOYS UNDER THE FLAG

Dick Mader, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mader of 464 East Main street, will leave Saturday night for Fort Bragg, N. C., where he will enter training for army service. A graduate of Ohio State university at the Winter convocation, he received his commission as second lieutenant in field artillery last June and was at that time given permission to complete his course at the university before being called for active duty.

Recent visitors at the home of Mrs. Sophia Sawyer, 450 East Ohio street, were her sons, Captain T. D. Sawyer, M. D., and James V. Sawyer of Akron. Captain Sawyer is serving in the South.

Jack Hatzo and James Stonerock, Jr., both training to serve in Uncle Sam's navy, arrived home Saturday for short leaves. Hatzo came from Lafayette, Ind., where he is in electrician's school at Purdue university, and Stonerock from New Orleans where he is preparing for service on a destroyer. The youths met in Cincinnati and completed their trip home to gether.

Hatzo, son of Mrs. Orpha Hatzo, will be graduated next Thursday from the electrician's school and is expecting a third class rating. Stonerock, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stonerock, recently left Great Lakes after requesting active service. He is to be rated as a gunner's mate.

First Sergeant Leo W. Black, who has been spending a short furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Black, of East Main street, left Friday to return to California where he is stationed with the 305th Service Squadron at the Army Air Base at Muroc field.

A cablegram has been received from William Melvin Andrews that he has arrived safely in North Africa.

Address of Private James Callahan at Atlantic City, N. J., is: 909th TSS, Sq. (sp), Flight B, Room 247, AAF, TTC.

Sergeant Robert Lee Trone, who has been transferred from Camp Pendleton, Va., to Key West, Fla., has been enjoying a 15-day furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Trone and sister, Mrs. Charles Dean, in Columbus and other relatives in and near Ashville. He is in Battery A, 50th C. A., Key West.

In addition to the educational film, Mr. Decker, who comes here as the guest of Renwick W. Dunlap, will show a movie of one of Ohio State's football games.

Persons wishing to enjoy the program may attend the meeting after 7:15 o'clock. Dinner will be served to Kiwanians at 6:30.

Streamlined Program Planned by County Farm Bureau.

WAR-TIME NEEDS TO BE STUDIED BY PRODUCERS

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Donna Lee Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Reid of Jackson, O., is resting well after undergoing an appendicitis operation Thursday in Grant hospital, Columbus. The Reids formerly lived in Circleville when Mr. Reid was affiliated with the City Loan Co.

Mrs. Harley Noggle, East Main street, who submitted to major surgery Friday in Berger hospital, is resting well.

Mrs. Charles Gray of Circleville, the former Eleanor Radcliff, is making a good recovery in Grant hospital, Columbus, after a major operation performed a week ago.

FISHERMEN GET BREAK BY OPEN SEASON SPLIT

Pickaway county bass fishermen will start to check through their tackle this week end in preparation for a season of sport which is made to order for them, providing they can find transportation.

State conservation officials, meeting, Friday, agreed on a separation of the state for black bass fishing with different dates being applied for the north and the south halves of Ohio. The dividing line is Route 35 from the Indiana line to Chillicothe and Route 50 from Chillicothe to Athens.

Prior to the lunch, Howard Dawson, extension specialist in swins at Ohio State university, will speak.

Following the lunch the program will be resumed with a play showing women in war work being planned by Mrs. Fannie Brooks, AAA farmer fieldwoman.

Speakers Scheduled

Speakers scheduled for the afternoon are L. K. Bear, sheep specialist, and L. P. McCann, beef specialist at Ohio State university. Both men are rated highly in their fields and their addresses are expected to be of much interest to the farm group.

Reports of Farm Bureau business and the amount of business transacted by the various affiliated organizations will also be heard in the afternoon. Records were established during 1942 in all branches of the bureau's work, it has been announced, but figures concerning volume of operation will not be announced until the annual meeting.

Committee planning the session includes Lawrence Liston, chairman; H. C. Hines, F. K. Blair, Charles Rose, Howard Huston, C. E. Dick, Mrs. Herman Berger and Miss Mary Shortridge.

With 300 members already putting their names on the Farm Bureau's honor roll by paying dues prior to Saturday, Farm Bureau organization expects to pass its 475 member goal during the next week when a membership campaign will be conducted. No solicitation for members has yet been conducted. Farm Bureau officials report that nearly 300 volunteers dues payers set a new record.
